Police Commissioner C. Manning, Jr., of Richmond, who was in Norfolk yesterday, stated that he was told there that one of the features of the plan for improving the administration of the city government now before the Council was the creation of a separate Police Board and the removal of the Police Department from the direction of the Board of Control, which has the management of a number of city departments in Norfolk, the argument being that by this move the police force would be less liable to political control, and that in the election of members of the Board of Control elements relating to the management of the police force would not sway the voters away from the selection of the best business men in the field.
